compact objects and accretion disks - arxiv - 2 roger blandford et al.: compact objects and accretion disks described in the context of laplace's nebular hypothesis and first seriously analyzed by lust (1952) they have been observed around black holes, neutron star and white dwarf binaries (shapiro & teukolsky 1983), around protostars, and especially within active temperature structure of compact objects - fileirp - compact objects more completely than the schwarzschild metric, and is supported by the emerg-ing evidence of x-ray data collected from neutron stars and black holes (agn). keywords physical metric, extended horizon, compact objects, neutron stars, black holes 1. introduction testing the nature of dark compact objects: a status report - very compact objects probe extreme gravitational elds and may be the key to understand outstanding puzzles in fundamental physics. these include the nature of dark matter, the fate of spacetime singularities, or the loss of unitarity in hawking evaporation. the standard astrophysical description of collapsing objects tells us compact objects in relativistic theories of gravity - in this dissertation we discuss several aspects of compact objects, i.e. neutron stars and black holes, in relativistic theories of gravity. we start by studying the role of nuclear physics (encoded in the so-called equation of state) in determining the properties of neu-tron stars in general relativity. phys833 astrophysics of compact objects 1. introduction 1 ... - phys833 astrophysics of compact objects 1. introduction 1.1 what is meant by "compact object"? compact stars - white dwarfs and neutron stars - are the ashes of luminous stars. a black hole is the fate of the most massive stars - an inaccessible region of space - time into which the star falls at the end of it luminous phase. table 1.1. stellar deaths and compact objects - texas a&m university - stellar deaths and compact objects next reported supernovae witnessed by tycho brahe in 1572 and johannes kepler in 1604. this was the last known supernovae in our galaxy. in 1987, the world witnessed sn 1987a in the large magellanic cloud, which occurred in a massively star-forming region. compact objects are as necessary to this subject as air to ... - compact objects are as necessary to this subject as air to breathe. r.w. thomason to a. neeman, [n3] contents 1. introduction 910 1.1. perfectstacks 911 1.2. tensorsandfunctors 913 1.3. centersandtraces 914 1.4. heckecategories 916 1.5. topologicalfieldtheory 917 2. preliminaries 919
